Subject No. 12	Vedas are the first book of human kind dating back to nearly 5000BCE. These works contains the invaluable data of history, life, society, archaeology, astronomy, economy and culture of ancient India. However the archaic Samskrit language of Vedas makes it difficult to understand the vedic works clearly. There are many Vedabhashyas aiming to explain meaning of Vedas from adhiyajna perspective. Western scholars too have tried their best to decipher Vedic codes without much success, best summed up by Maxmuller as follows "Large number of Vedic hymns are childish in the extreme; tedious, low, commonplace." Thus there is a great need to understand the Vedic works in a comprehensive manner without any prejudice for adhiyajna or adhidaiva or adhyatma models taking all these views into consideration. Hence it is proposed to initiate a process of writing new Vedabhashya with modern view point and Indian tradition.
